Monterey Bay Aquarium Update on Coronavirus

The Monterey Bay Aquarium is closely monitoring the developments of the global outbreak of coronavirus (COVID-19). We are following updates from the World Health Organization (WHO), the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), as well as other federal, state and local authorities and are in contact with the Monterey County Health Department. These organizations continue to report the risk to the general public is low. Based upon the current situation, the Aquarium will remain open and operating as normal.

The health of our staff, volunteers, guests and community is a top priority for the Aquarium and we are taking appropriate action to prepare for any escalation of this outbreak, which includes sanitation training for staff and volunteers, increased cleaning, stocking and making available sanitation supplies, and monitoring all international travel of staff.

We advise all visitors to follow the Everyday Preventive Actions and Non-pharmaceutical Interventions (NPIs) recommendations issued by the CDC to prevent the spread of coronavirus or any other communicable disease.

If you wish to change your plans for visiting, all admittance tickets are good up to one year after purchase. If you are unable to reschedule, please call our sales center.
